Traffic lights

Traffic lighting can be used in any subject in a variety of ways. The principle is simple.

Green	Amber	Red
I understand this very well. I am confident in my knowledge	I recall some key principles, but I need to refresh myself to be able to answer questions with confidence	I am not confident at all and can remember very little or nothing about this

You could:

- Highlight the top of pages in your exercise books to indicate your level of confidence. Then go through with a focus on your red pages, see if you can improve
- You could highlight learning objectives from each lesson
- You could highlight the specification line by line and then seek out information/support for your reds

Don't look at the red's as a negative, these are all things you can improve on, through your own hard work and with support from your teachers!

Don't forget to update your traffic lights as you gain confidence. Watching a traffic light change from Red to Orange to Green is an incredibly powerful message that your hard work is paying off.

For those that stay persistently red, ask why you are not there yet? What additional support might you benefit from?
